Preface

This edition of the Standard Catalog for Public Libraries includes 12,300 books carefully selected with the aid of librarians and specialists. These books are arranged in classes according to the Dewey Decimal Classification and are fully annotated with the indication of the sources of all quoted notes. In addition to the books selected and fully cataloged, about 3555 other books have been mentioned in notes. This should substantially increase the usefulness of this Catalog especially in large libraries.

Revision. This edition of the Catalog is a revision of the 1940 edition and of the annual supplements issued 1941-1947. Out of date titles and many out of print titles have been dropped in this revision. New books and new editions of older books published in 1948 and the first half of 1949 have been included.

The editors are greatly indebted to librarians and specialists in various subjects for their valuable cooperation. A list of these collaborators follows this Preface. They have reconsidered every title in the 1940 edition and the 1941-1945 Supplement, checking to indicate those titles which should be omitted and selecting those to be starred, noted, etc. In addition the collaborators have checked in the same way long lists of new titles each year, 1946-1949. The 1946-1947 Supplement has been included without reconsideration. No supplement was published for 1948.

History. In 1918 the first of seven non-fiction sections, which were later to be combined, was published. This was the "Sociology Section" edited by Corinne Bacon. The first complete Standard Catalog for Public Libraries, edited by Minnie Earl Sears was published in 1934. This combined all the non-fiction sections previously published and brought them up to date. Since then annual supplements have been issued with frequent cumulations and a revised edition in 1940.

Scope. The selection of books included has been made primarily for small and medium-sized libraries, but the list will be found useful in larger libraries, especially in suggesting good titles for first purchase. Since this Catalog is intended to be a practical list of books which the average public library of small or medium size will be able to afford and will find most useful, it has been necessary to omit scholarly and expensive works not suited to this class of libraries. A number of classics, now seldom used, are also omitted since their purchase would form a source of expense hardly justifiable. However, it is well to remember that even small libraries need some expensive books, if quality rather than quantity is to be emphasized. Additional titles which are desirable in large and scholarly libraries or in special libraries are given in notes, but it should be borne in mind that the selection is not based on the needs of the specialist.

The general policy has been to include books in the English language only. Of course libraries will wish to have a representation of foreign literatures in the original, measured to suit the local demand, but it is felt that the compilation of a list of that kind should form a separate undertaking. No attempt has been made to include a large number of the classics in translation. The editions listed are those which have been found most useful by librarians in work with the average public.

This Catalog is made primarily for American libraries, but it is hoped it may also prove useful in all English-speaking countries. The cooperation of Canadian librarians in many sections of the Catalog has made it possible to include some representative titles, which, while perhaps better known to Canadian readers, are of interest to American libraries.

Arrangement. This Catalog is divided into two parts: Part 1 a Classified catalog; Part 2 an Author, Title, Subject and Analytical index. The classified catalog is arranged in accordance with the Dewey Decimal Classification with the classes in strictly numerical order. Individual biography, except lives of artists and musicians and biographies of Christ, are classified 92 where the arrangement is by the subject of the biography. In this class "see" references have been made from the name of each artist or musician to the class where books about him will be found. Biographies of artists are classified with books on the art represented (e.g. Sargent, an American painter, in 759.1 with other books on American painting). Lives of musicians are in class 780.92. Biographies of Christ will be found in class 232. All of this material may be found thru the index.

Form of Entry. In 1938 The H. W. Wilson Company began printing sets of catalog cards for all books that were likely to be selected for inclusion in the Standard Catalog for Public Libraries, the Standard Catalog for High School Libraries, and the Children's Catalog. Books for which these sets of cards are available are indicated by (W) immediately after the subject headings indicated for each book. The Library of Congress number is also given for use in ordering LC cards.

Classification and subject headings have been worked out in accordance with the D.C. numbers, length of numbers, and subjects given in the fifth edition of "Subject Headings for Small Libraries," edited by Minnie Earl Sears.

Analytical Index. A large number of analytics for parts of books have been included in the Author, Title, Subject and Analytical Index. This indexing will make available much material which it is usually not practicable to bring out in library catalogs because of the expense. In this index 2000 books have been analyzed wholly or in part. Analytical entries cover many subjects represented in the Catalog by entire books (e.g. Furniture) as well as those for which whole books are not included (e.g. Dominican Republic). Usually analytical entries have been made only for material covering at least ten pages. Books have not been analyzed if the title or classification number indicates it is the obvious place to look for such material (e.g. histories of countries, travel books, etc.) Author and title analytics for collections of plays have been made unless the collection was included in "Index to Plays in Collections," by John Henry Ottemiller, 1943 edition. A line "Indexed in Ottemiller" is given in the entry in the classified part for each collection not analyzed in the index to this Catalog. Full contents of each collection has been added.

Books included in the "Essay and General Literature Index" are likewise indicated. Many of those books are also analyzed in this Catalog for the benefit of the small library.

An attempt has been made to include in the index all subjects indicated in the subject line of each entry in the classified part. Entries for many series have been added. As a rule title entries have been included in the Index unless they duplicated the subject entry.

The filing is based on the rules given in the "A.L.A. Rules for Filing Catalog Cards."

Books for First Purchase. About 2500 books have been marked with either a single or a double star to indicate those books which are most highly recommended and which may be considered for first purchase. These stars, added with the advice of collaborators, are assigned by classes. Out of print books have not been starred because of the difficulty in securing them, altho in many of the classes the out of print books received the highest recommendations. When possible about one-fourth of the books in each class are starred.

It is possible, of course, that some libraries may not need to purchase all these starred titles, since some communities would not need books in all classes. In the 600 classes, for example, some libraries would not need even the starred title in highly specialized fields.

Titles in notes. About 3555 books are entered in smaller type with very brief annotations, because they are: 1. Expensive books which libraries should know; 2. Specialized books which have been suggested as recommended if a library needs them; 3. Out-of-print books which received good votes; 4. Additional books recommended for libraries needing more material, or more specialized material, than is offered by the books fully entered. In former editions of the Catalog, books which were not fully entered were usually noted under other books by the same author or under other books by different authors which resembled the noted titles in content or point of view. Because many libraries check their own holdings with this Catalog for the purpose of adding books to their collection or discarding books that may be out of date, it was suggested that notes would be more valuable if entered alphabetically at ends of classes. This form has therefore been very generally adhered to.

Uses. This Catalog will serve several purposes. (1) Use as a purchasing list, showing the best titles for small and medium sized public libraries to buy in the fields covered, and indicating by starred titles the books recommended for first purchase. To aid in this use full information is given about publishers, prices and editions. (2) Use as an aid in interlibrary loan. Since this Catalog furnishes lists of the good books on a given subject, a librarian unable to supply material may borrow from other libraries the most useful books in print. (3) Use as a reference and bibliographic tool for reference workers and readers' advisers. The full analytical index which brings out material not readily found elsewhere has been added with this end in view. The additional titles given in notes will also add to the reference value. (4) Use as an aid in library schools and training classes in teaching courses in book selection.

Prices. Editions. Publication date. The prices given are those of 1948. In order to have the information as accurate as possible the information about prices, editions and out of print books was obtained directly from the publishers early in 1948. For prices since then the 1948 and 1949 issues of the "Cumulative Book Index" and "Publishers Trade List Annual" have been used. In general new editions issued in 1950 have not been included. An effort was made to watch current book trade publications for reprints of the out of print books.

Out of Print Books. A number of out of print books from the previous edition have been retained because they are still useful and desirable from the library point of view. There is always the possibility that the more desirable ones may be reprinted if the demand is sufficient and of course it is often possible to buy second-hand copies of these books.

Acknowledgments. Thanks are due the publishers who have generously given us copies of books included in the Catalog. Without these books at hand it would not have been possible to give proper annotations and the analytical entries in the Index. The publishers have also cooperated by furnishing information about prices and editions.

We are also indebted for the generous help given by the collaborators. The editors have been guided by their advice, but are responsible for the final selection and in some cases have cast the deciding vote.

The responsibility for this edition of the Standard Catalog for Public Libraries is a joint responsibility. The final selection of titles and revision of most of the annotations have been done by Dorothy E. Cook and Dorothy H. West. Other members of the staff of the Standard Catalog Series, especially Estelle A. Fidell, Mrs. Margaret Dirk and Mrs. Dorothy M. Peake supervised the preparation of the copy and the catalog entries. The editors thank the other members of the staff for their efficient assistance in all phases of the work.

It is planned to continue the policy of keeping the Catalog up to date by issuing annual supplements.

Booklist; a guide to new books. A.L.A. $5 year 016

1 Books and reading—Best books (5-18642)

A semi-monthly guide to current books, first published 1905. Arranged by Dewey classification giving the L. C. card number, suggested subject headings, and a critical note. Lists at intervals, pamphlets, documents and new editions of old works

1 Books and reading—Best books (W) 45-37889

First published 1910. "To a considerable degree, this list of approximately 1800 titles represents those books which a newly established library would consider for first purchase. It is made up of books of interest to today's reading public, books which have been read with enthusiasm by library patrons, and which are likely to be of permanent value. Its emphasis is on titles published since 1940, although some earlier ones are included because they are still important. New editions of basic titles are also included." Foreword

Books are arranged in the order of the Decimal classification and have brief descriptive annotations. Previous edition, 1925, was compiled by M. H. Pope

Books for Catholic colleges; a supplement to Shaw's List of books for college libraries; comp. by Sister Melania Grace and Gilbert C. Peterson. A.L.A. 1948 134p $3.75 016

1 Books and reading—Best books 2 Libraries, Catholic 3 Libraries, University and college (W) 48-11124

"The Catholic supplement to the Shaw list is intended to . . . serve as an additional measuring stick by accrediting agencies in their evaluation of Catholic college book collections. It provides a check list for individual librarians and institutions in surveying their collections and in purchasing new titles." Introduction

"The data on book prices will have to be used cautiously, as a number of titles are indicated as still being in print, such as Crowley's Catholic High School Principal, which has been out of print for a number of years. The index is satisfactory from the standpoint of locating authors but is not intended as a subject index to the individual titles. . . However the criticisms mentioned above are relatively minor in nature. As a whole, this list will stand as a basic tool for Catholic college librarians and college administrators in building and evaluating their collections. We should be most grateful to the compilers and to their colleagues in preparing a worthwhile reference." Library journal

1 Reference books—Bibliographies
(W) 42-36274

"Attempts to provide an alphabetic subject guide to the books needed in libraries for the answering of reference questions frequently asked . . . and to point the way to or recall sources of information in books commonly held as well as in some less well-known. . . Each reference book is listed wherever it would seem to be of practical usefulness, usually with an annotation adapted to the special use for which it is listed." Preface

"This book departs from the usual practice of listing reference books by type, and groups them instead under selected subjects which represent the most frequently asked reference questions. . . Since it developed out of the author's unit method of teaching reference work at the School of library science of Western reserve university, it can be used also as a guide for this type of instruction." of sale, lot number in original auction catalog, price. Includes books of all periods and languages and is of importance in reference work both as a record of market prices of secondhand books and as a supplement to general and national bibliographies, as it not infrequently includes titles or editions not listed in such bibliographies. In case of rare books location of the copies sold can sometimes be traced by applying to the auctioneer, and the giving of the lot number in the sales catalog furnishes a clue to a fuller and sometimes important description." Library trustee, prepared for the Trustees section of the American library association. A.L.A. 1937 180p $2.35 023

1 Libraries—Trustees (W) 37-14718

"This book replaces [the American library association's] 'The trustee and his library,' 1927. It is based on the practical problems and questions which are faced by every 'conscientious citizen when he first becomes a library trustee.' Presented in the form of questions, each followed by a detailed analysis. Planned for medium sized libraries (up to 100,000 population) and excellent to put in the hands of trustees anywhere." "The writer has had in mind service in medium-size and large public libraries; nevertheless, it is hoped that the material assembled may have some suggestions for libraries of various sizes and kinds." Foreword

Partial contents: Executives, major and minor; Graded systems and classified services; Selection and appointment of staff; In-service training; Promotions; Libraries and civil service; Certification; Bibliography

"A competent treatment of the general field. It is natural that a detailed study of this kind should emphasize the personnel problems of large and medium-size public libraries. Nevertheless, much of the material presented is readily adaptable to the needs of small public libraries and also to libraries of other types." Library journal

The variety of information available, as well as the range of organizations represented, are revealed in the Index volume. . . . The real value of the work lies in the location of sources of information important to the scholar and to the research worker—sources which might not otherwise be discovered except through lengthy search." "Ditzion's provocative analysis of the flowering of the public library movement is a major contribution to the field of American cultural history. Though not the first work on the subject, for Green's charmingly written classic and Fletcher's brief historical survey stand unrivaled, his is the first study which measures up to the standards of modern historical scholarship . . . Ditzion's volume is based upon intensive research in primary and secondary materials." Library journal

1 Libraries 2 Libraries—Trustees 3 Libraries and state 4 Library finance 5 Library legislation 35-27194

In this volume Professor Joeckel "has undertaken to describe, analyze, and evaluate the position of the public library in the structure of government in the United States. He has dealt with the legal forms and types of governmental organization of the public library and with its relation to the city or other political unit to which it is attached or which it serves, and has considered the library primarily as a piece of governmental machinery and its efficiency as such, rather than the practical problems of its internal administration." Foreword

"The entire volume is most readable; the style, lucid. Frequent summaries and 'conclusions' aid the reader materially in keeping the continuity clearly in mind. The work is crammed with facts, thoroughly substantiated. Its opinions and recommendations are clear cut and well defended; stimulating, often challenging." Library quarterly

A report on American libraries based on a trip made by the director of the University library of Oslo in 1936 through 36 states and 4 Canadian provinces. The survey was made at the request of the Carnegie corporation

"Dr. Munthe sees American librarianship as many librarians see it, and fortunately is in a position to express his views freely. His sincerity is enhanced by his humor. . . Dr. Munthe touches every library problem briefly but vitally. His praises are generally admitted as well deserved; his adverse criticisms, though seconded by many librarians, have not been broadcast. It is for this reason that his critical attitude is emphasized in this review." Survey

1 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 40-6023

A supplement covering the years 1935 thru February 28, 1946 is included in all volumes sold at present (1948) and is sent free on request to libraries already owning the earlier printings. Paged separately (64p)

"This one volume encyclopedia is amazingly comprehensive with its 52,000 separate entries and 45,000 cross references. The articles are brief and simple in presentation even when on difficult scientific and erudite subjects. It is particularly rich in biographical articles. Useful for quick reference anywhere, and a specially handy volume in offices, the home, high school and small public libraries." N.Y. libraries

"Its entries are well selected, and generally adequate in accuracy. . . An excellent cross-reference system enables readers to pursue a subject into its related entries; and bibliographical references . . . enable him to go further elsewhere." Sat. rev. of lit.

Encyclopedia Americana. . . Americana corp. 30v illus maps $174.50 030

1 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 48-2685

The 1918-20 edition was thoroly revised and reset. The 1931-32 reissue was a "plate revision" printed from the plates used in the 1918-20 edition and subsequent issues, but showing many changes and additions. According to the publishers new editions are issued annually with new articles on subjects of current interest. Beginning with 1942 v30 has been issued as a comprehensive alphabetic index

Reviewed in "Subscription books bulletin" October 1939, July 1941 and October 1945

New international encyclopaedia. 2d ed. Funk 1922 23v, and 1930 Supplement 2v o.p. 1948 030

1 Encyclopedias and dictionaries 38-37785

A well-edited, well-proportioned encyclopedia of good modern type unfortunately now not entirely up to date. Strong features are its inclusion of small subjects in the main alphabet, numerous biographies and its many excellent bibliographies. The main work is the 2d edition 1914-16, reprinted with changes and revision in the 1922 issue, reissued with later dates. Libraries having either the 1914-16 edition or the 1922 issue of that edition need add only the 1930 supplement, and the Yearbooks titles of magazines either started since May 1945, or discovered by the authors since that date." Foreword to second printing

"By 'little' magazines the authors do not mean the pocket-sized commercial products which swarm on our newsstands. They mean magazines which are (or have been) little in circulation but big in literary, critical, personal, or political pretensions—and sometimes in achievement—such non-commercial magazines as Poetry, The Little Review, Transition, Horizon, Broom, The Dial, The Masses, Hound and Horn, The Partisan Review . . . It also provides a voluminous index of magazines and personalities, and a valuable checklist of more than five hundred little magazines which have been published in the English language, since Reedy's St. Louis Mirror began in 1891." 1 Philosophy 33-12625

"A simply written introduction to the thoughts of the philosophers—from the Old Testament writers to the present—concerning the great problems of life, morality and religion. Suggested readings at end of chapters." Book rev. digest

"A volume which will be welcomed not only as a text in philosophy but as a book of cultural worth for all serious readers. Will Durant's 'Story of Philosophy' [in class 109] is suggestive as an introduction to the thinkers of the past. This volume goes more fully into the problems of philosophy itself. . . To those who seek more and more light, who desire to pursue the truth, Dr Drake extends in this well-written volume an invitation to philosophy." Springfield Republican

1 Philosophy 36-25820

"The background and principles of the main philosophic theories, for the beginner. Fourteen page bibliography." Bkl.

"Finding that the confusion of many of his students with regard to religion is due to their not getting in 'on the ground floor of the philosophical approach,' the author sets out to help them and others to get sound foundations for religious thinking . . . Mistaken notions of religion are dealt with in a clarifying manner, with a wealth of concrete illustration. . . The second and major part deals with the main themes of religious philosophy in a helpful expository manner—the existence and character of God, what is 'value,' the problem of evil, freedom, prayer, and immortality." Religious bk. club bul.

1 Philosophy 35-22646

"In this revision of the 'Introduction', [first published 1924] the number of chapters has been increased. . . All the chapters save one have been revised or rewritten—and some new ones added." Preface to second edition

"In his introduction to philosophy Professor Patrick deals with both speculative and critical philosophy and places special emphasis on the aspects which come nearest to the average thoughtful mind that gives itself to reflection about the meaning, purpose and value of life. The book summarizes clearly and helpfully the conceptions of various thinkers on the themes discussed. Each chapter has its bibliography." Book rev. digest

1 Evolution 2 Life 3 Metaphysics 44-40113

First published 1907. The 1944 edition is reset with a new foreword

"Brilliant and original work, aiming to show that the evolutions of life and of intelligence are interdependent. An important contribution to the study of the subject, in parts difficult reading but full of interest even to those without scientific training." N.Y. state lib.

Ellis, Havelock, 1859-1939
Dance of life; with a new introduction. Modern lib. 363p $1.25 110

29-30210

1923 edition analyzed in Essay and general literature index

First published 1923 by Houghton and still available from them in the Riverside library series at $2. The Modern lib. edition has a new foreword and was reset with smaller margins

"Originality of thought, a lucid style and mellowness of atmosphere mark this exposition of the author's philosophy concerning life as an art. From the study of dancing as a 'primary and essential art,' the theme is expanded through a consideration of the arts of thinking, writing, religion and morals. At once illuminating and readable." N.Y. state lib.

Harper, Ralph, 1915-
* Existentialism; a theory of man. Harvard univ. press 1948 163p $3 110

1 Existentialism 48-7276

"The much-discussed philosophical theory known as existentialism is here described in terms of the views of four of its exponents: (1) Kierkegaard, the Danish philosopher of a century ago, who laid the groundwork; (2) Heidegger, the German who followed the negative implications of Kierkegaard's thought and arrived at an ontological nihilism; (3) Sartre, the French tragedian whose outlook is summarized as a 'new stoicism,' and (4) Rousselot, the French Jesuit, who, following the more positive side of Kierkegaard, emphasizes the dynamic aspects and ends with an 'interiorized Scholasticism'. . . This is a book for those with strong philosophical interests. For those not at home in metaphysics it is 'stiff going.'" Religious bk. club bul.

‡ Human destiny. Longmans 1947 289p $3.50 110

1 Evolution 2 Metaphysics 3 Religion and science 4 Teleology (W) 47-1523

"Dr. du Noüy, an internationally famous French scientist, contends that science finds a purpose evident in the history of life that rises above the laws of matter. His book deals with the drama of creation —and concludes on a note of hope: that the destiny of humanity is to achieve, through evolution a world both pure and spiritual." Huntting

"Neither the plea nor the argument is wholly new, but both are presented with an eloquence and a sincerity that cannot fail to impress." N.Y. Times

* Existentialism; tr. by Bernard Frechtman. Philosophical lib. 1947 92p $2.75 110

1 Existentialism 47-6814

"Originally delivered in Paris in 1945 as a lecture, this essay presents the implications pursuant upon assuming the nonexistence of God, denying the existence of fixed human nature, and Sartre's refusal to allow man any support external to himself. . . A one page index follows the transcription of a discussion between Sartre and M. Naville, well known French Marxist." Library journal

Wahl, Jean André, 1888-
A short history of existentialism; tr. from the French by Forrest Williams and Stanley Maron. Philosophical lib. 1949 58p $2.75 110

1 Existentialism 49-8558

"The substance of the text was originally delivered in a lecture in 1946 on France at a meeting of the Club Maintenant. The slightly revised form translated here was prepared by the author himself."

"As an introduction Wahl is excellent. But the book will offer most to those who have Kirkegaard et al firmly under their belts. The translators faced difficult problems of thought and terminology which, unfortunately, they did not resolve with complete success." San Francisco Chronicle

New universe; an outline of the worlds in which we live. Van Nostrand 1926 455p illus $4 113

1 Evolution 2 Philosophy, Modern 3 Sociology 4 Universe 26-22007

"This book attempts to describe man's spiritual and physical development and his ever increasing relationships (through increased knowledge) with the cosmos. There are four main divisions: Studies in nature; Studies in social policy; Studies in personal values and General ideas of the world. The discussion is interesting and seldom abstruse." Bkl.

"A book, well planned, scholarly, crammed with references and quotations, yet eminently readable, with attractive qualities of personality and humor. The book has a higher quality—it goes back to the eternal things; it inspires new hope for the future of philosophical thinking and writing in America; it carries a genuine promise." N.Y. Times

"The story of the development of man's mind and of his efforts to understand the universe, and to reconcile his developing knowledge with his old religion. Readable and stimulating." Wis. bul.

"This book . . .tries to present some of the spade work which is required before anyone can begin to plant the seeds of a philosophy. It suggests in a fragmentary way the effect of science upon those beliefs the holding of which makes life worth living for each of us. It is not therefore exactly a history of science but a history of the human imagination as science has affected it and allowed it to grow." Preface

Self-analysis. Norton 1942 309p $3.50 131.34

1 Psychoanalysis (W) 42-6940

Partial contents: Feasibility and desirability of self-analysis; Stages of psychoanalytic understanding; Patient's share in the psychoanalytic process; Analyst's share in the psychoanalytic process; Systematic self-analysis; Limitations of self-analysis

The author "very carefully outlines the procedure by which one can psychoanalyze himself. As might be expected she limits the possibilities strictly. . . But if you understand the subject somewhat, have been started out by a good analyst, and are able to return for occasional check-up and advice, this book can be helpful." Book-of-the-month club news

The authors attempt is to evaluate the advantages and disadvantages of residential (institutional) life at different phases and in different aspects of the infant's development. They come to the conclusion that there are realms in the infant's life where the residential nursery can be helpful by creating excellent conditions for certain types of development; but that there are others where residential homes have to recognize their limitations if they want to face and fight more effectively the serious consequences of such limitations. The observations recorded were collected from three houses of the Hampstead nurseries in England

1 Child study 2 Children, Abnormal and backward 3 Parent and child 28-22566

"Following a general discussion of the problems of parent-child relationships, the author cites a number of clinical cases in which the difficulties of the problem child were traced to their origins and an effort made at correcting faulty attitudes on the part of parents and wrong conditions in the home environment." Book rev. digest

"The careful analysis of the parent-child and equally important (but sometimes forgotten) child-parent relationship, based not only on concrete experience but thorough search of the literature, is a very real contribution and should be of great use to all those interested in 'thinking through' even the minor problems arising from these relationships." 1 Psychology 39-12411

A revision and rearrangement of the authors' "Psychology; a factual textbook." There are new chapters on social functions of the individual, individual differences, motivation, personality, response, perception, and sensation

"The previous edition proved itself a satisfactory text-book. It was up to date accurate and eclectic. In its new form, with additional matter and an increased number of collaborators, it appears to have sacrificed none of these merits. It should prove to be as satisfactory as its predecessor. Whether the new order of presentation is the better can only be told by trial." Nature

Harriman, Philip Lawrence, 1894-
New dictionary of psychology. Philosophical lib. 1947 364p $5 150.3

1 Psychology—Dictionaries 47-6873

"Since psychology is a rapidly expanding field of knowledge, its vocabulary is constantly growing. A handbook or dictionary, therefore, cannot include all the terms and concepts of the science. Many terms, however, are sufficiently well-established in the literature to have a precise denotation, and an effort has been made to include them here. Wherever it was possible, the name of the person who first introduced the term, together with an important date, has been given." Foreword

Dewey, John, 1859-
* How we think; a restatement of the relation of reflective thinking to the educative process. Heath 1933 301p $3 153

1 Educational psychology 2 Thought and thinking 33-27208

"The new edition of 'How We Think' [published in 1910] is, as its subtitle indicates, a 'restatement'... The present book contains nearly a quarter more than did the older account... Scrupulous pains have been taken to restate all ideas that were found by teachers to give undue trouble in understanding." Preface

"A serviceable introduction to the general subject. It covers an analysis of the thinking process and the training of thinking on the basis of natural aptitudes. It reflects educational wisdom." Joseph Jastrow

Dimnet, Ernest, 1866-
* Art of thinking. Simon & Schuster 1928 216p $2.50 153

1 Thought and thinking 28-25828

"A distinguished book written by a distinguished author for the encouragement of people without distinction. Its purpose is to convince men and women who are neither morons nor geniuses that they can nevertheless have a vigorous and interesting mental life of their own, a life that is more than the mere parroting of current shibboleths, which has become the popular substitute for thought." Christian century

"As an assistance to the art of thinking, M. Dimnet gives much advice which would be extremely useful to anyone on the point of practising this art. If M. Dimnet does not seem to go to the root of the problem why everybody does not practice this art, he is more likely to be useful to those who are about to practise it." Times (London) lit. sup.

Beginning with Platonism in Colonial times, this book traces the ideas and influences which have taken root in this country down to the present, with all the significant philosophers and schools of thought represented. It is a study of one branch of the general history of philosophy, a contribution to the history of American culture—especially American literature, social theory, political theory, and religion

The famous zoologist undertook to organize the latest results and hypotheses of natural science into a system of monism. The second work specifically devoted to this purpose was his vigorous and dogmatic "Riddle of the universe." The monism of Haeckel combines spiritualistic and materialistic ideas in a way that is not altogether clear. These excerpts are grouped under subjects: On God, On man, and On man's well-being. The appendix gives the sources of the selections from the "Ethics." Introductory material includes a short biography and a critical essay

"Spinoza, perhaps more than any other great philosopher, directed all his work to a single unvarying aim. The question of how man shall live to realize his best potentialities is never far from any problem on which he embarks. . . [He] did not trouble to treat metaphysical, mechanical, methodological problems separately, but only as they are the necessary preparation to ethics." R. P. McKeon

The author "considers the function of religion in promoting mental health. He approves of the trend in modern therapy to turn the patient's thoughts to things outside himself, and says that it is here that religion performs its essential function. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

Murray, Rosalind, 1890-

Good pagan's failure. Longmans 1948 177p $2.75 201

1 Apologetics 2 Christianity—Philosophy (W) 48-5362

The author's theme is that the break-up of our world is due to the failure of the good pagan and not the "failure of Christianity," which has not failed because it has not been fully tried. The consequence of the good pagan's denial of God has been his misunderstanding of man to whom he has attributed endless perfectibility. He did not take into account that the Christian morality which he advised depended on the Christian dogma which he rejected

Philosophy of religion; the impact of modern knowledge on religion. Appleton 1948 409p $5 201

1 Religion—Philosophy (W) 48-8752

The purpose of this book is to show the relationship between human reason and religion. It suggests that philosophy today has reached a point of irrationalism where it is in utter contempt of lasting truths. In terms of modern knowledge, it restates Saint Thomas' five ways of proving the existence of God and evaluates the impact of modern thought on religion

The author's method is to take the books of the Bible in the chronological order in which they were written and in brief compass, usually not exceeding five or six pages, to portray the circumstances that called it forth, to point up its cardinal ideas, and thus to set its human interest and its individuality in bold relief. A series of questions at the end of each chapter make the book appropriate for use by Bible study classes." Religious bk. club bul.

Analyzed in Essay and general literature index

Starting when the Bible was introduced into England by Augustine's band in A.D. 597, the author tells how it permeated pagan culture and initiated a literature of its own. He tracks it down the ages showing how the world's best seller has created the dramas now enjoyed, changed fashions in naming towns and babies, given men new words and words new meanings

Goodspeed (1923) These volumes are obtainable separately from the Univ. of Chicago press as follows: Old Testament $4, New Testament $1.50, Apocrypha $3.75

"Goodspeed's New Testament . . . rests upon the discovery that the language in which the New Testament was written is the colloquial Greek of its time and place. The translator's purpose, therefore, was . . the making of a new translation which would convey to presents readers both the thought and the mood which the original conveyed to its first readers. The success with which this purpose has been achieved has been generally acclaimed. The original [of the Old Testament] is not colloquial. The eminent scholars who collaborated with Professor Smith have been duly mindful of this, and have departed from the familiar versions less radically." Christian century

"The authors of the Revised Version had a great opportunity, but it cannot be said that they made the most of it; a very considerable number of beautiful and moving phrases were still left in the work after they had done with it. But Professor Moffatt has put things right. In his crisp and nervous version, the Bible should at last come into its own, as a book which no gentleman's library should be without. 7-34574

"In the belief that the present form and arrangement of the Bible with its mixture of great and small, text and note, matter and appendix, poetry and prose, are a hindrance to its literary appreciation, Dr Moulton has prepared this [work]. By selection and condensation, by the omission of exegesis and notes which interrupt the continuity of the narrative, and arbitrary chapter and verse divisions which take from the pleasure of Bible reading, he has brought out the unity of the Bible and presented it in literary form." * Bible designed to be read as living literature; the Old and the New testaments in the King James version. . . ed. by Ernest Sutherland Bates. Simon & Schuster 1936 xxiv, 1239p $3.95 220.5

In this new arrangement of the Bible as contemporary literature "the text of the King James Version is followed, except in the case of Proverbs, Job, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Songs, where that of the Revised Version is used; the arrangement of the books is by time and subject matter; prose passages are printed as prose, verse as verse, drama as drama; letters as letters; the spelling and punctuation are modernized; genealogies and repetitions are omitted, as well as the whole of Chronicles, the minor Epistles, and similar unimportant passages throughout." Publisher's note

"With taste, discernment, and a minimum of comment, most of which is informed, and to this reviewer highly interesting, Mr. Bates has elucidated the huge heterogeneous work. Or rather by a sensible rearrangement he has as far as possible allowed it to elucidate itself. Of course in this he is under obligation duly acknowledged to Professor Moulton and other scholars. But he seems to me thoroughly justified in his own effort . . . The whole of his undertaking is good." Sat. rev. of lit.

Book rev. digest

"The translation, like that of the American Translation by the same authors, is forthright and easy to read. Excellent features are the historical sketches and the statements as to the religious and literary value of each book. . . The volume is handy in size, and printing and type are excellent." 1 Bible—Antiquities 2 Bible—Evidences, authority, etc. 3 Excavations (Archaeology) [36-27088]

First published 1936. The 1947 edition is a reprint with corrections

"Intended . . . for general students and for those teachers in the schools who wish to know where they can find information about archaeological discoveries and their bearings on Biblical history." Times (London) lit. sup.

"The work is most illuminating in shedding new light upon many familiar stories of the Bible. The effect is to intensify our mental pictures of those ancient peoples who played so important a part in developing the conditions which eventuated in Christianity. Thus the Bible story is vivified, is made to live. Illustrations add to the attractiveness of the volume, and the many notes, tables, appendices and maps greatly enhance its usefulness. The style is popular, easy to read, even for the layman." Christian science monitor

"A liberal interpreter . . . considers these often asked questions: Do we really know there is a God? Is the sense of God's presence a delusion? Can we discover anything about God? Can we reconcile God's love and the world's pain? Where do we meet God in daily life? How does God speak to us? Does God have a purpose for individuals? How much will God do to help us? Can a person who has no sense of God gain one?" Book rev. digest

"The value of this book lies in the clearness with which opposing points of view are stated, in the fair liberality of conclusions reached, and in the compact citation of representative religious convictions told by men whose sincerity cannot be doubted." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 Good and evil 2 Pain 3 Providence and government of God 44-3490

"In a severely logical treatment the author probes the enigma of pain to its depths. The chief issue, of course, is the reconciliation of the fact of suffering with the power and the goodness of God. . . The book as a whole is, in effect, a brilliant defense of Christian orthodoxy as well as an exposition of the specific problem under discussion." Religious bk. club bul.

Lewis, Edwin, 1881-

The Creator and the adversary. Abingdon-Cokesbury 1948 279p $3 231

1 God 2 Good and evil 3 Sin 48-3972

The author contends "that the fact of evil in the world compels us to believe that the Creator is hindered by an alien and demonic power. He definitely rejects the monistic position which holds that the universe can be understood in terms of a single all-powerful principle of good. He concludes that 'holy Love' has a malignant adversary whose opposition must continually be reckoned with." Religious bk. club bul.

1 Revelation 41-5080

"Contains, with some additions and revisions, the Nathanael W. Taylor lectures given at the Divinity school of Yale university in April, 1940." Preface

"This is a careful study of the real meaning of divine revelation, which dodges none of the issues. The author begins by admitting the relativity of all our knowledge, but insists that any knowledge of God must begin with faith in Him, and it must be a particular faith, since there is no other kind. It must adopt the confessional, not the apologetic, method in its study of revelation." Churchman

A reprint of the title first published in English 1910. Translated by W. Montgomery from the first German edition, 1906

A study of the struggle which the best equipped intellects of the modern world have waged in trying to realise for themselves the historical personality of Our Lord. It considers the life of Christ from the 17th to the 19th centuries. In the closing chapter Schweitzer urges Christians to drop all the reconstructed Christologies and to follow instead the spiritual example of Jesus himself

Analyzed in Essay and general literature index

An historical survey of the Protestant missionary movement told mainly thru the biographies of 35 missionaries, with special emphasis on recent times

"This book, the author says, is not an attempt at a 'complete biographical history of missions' but rather a collection of sketches of the lives and missionary careers of a few typical men and women—Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans, and Congregationalists—most of whom belonged to the student volunteer movement." 1 Church history 2 Martyrs 3 Persecution 26-14999

The first English edition of this classic appeared in 1563. "The book is far more than a bare record of persecution. It is an arsenal of controversy, and a storehouse of romance, as well as a source of edification. Protestantism is traced to its origins in England, Bohemia and Germany, and the corruptions which had crept into the Church of Rome are exposed at enormous length and with unsparing denunciation." J. A Haddam house book

A statement of evangelical Protestantism, the form of Christianity that was born of and lives by its witness to the full and revivified gospel. It is an account of Protestantism's origin and development, and an analysis of its meaning and content. Beginning with a survey of the unbroken life of the evangelical fellowship from the days of the apostles to our own. The author provides an adventure in the exploration of total Christian territory

A one volume abridged edition of the great twelve volume work on the anthropology of religion (3d ed. Macmillan 1907-15 12v $30) In the abridgement "while the bulk of the book has been greatly reduced, the author has endeavoured to retain its leading principles, together with an amount of evidence sufficient to illustrate them clearly. The language of the original has also for the most part been preserved." Preface

Of the unabridged edition Miss Mudge says: "Not a reference book in the ordinary sense of the word, but a great storehouse of information about primitive religion"

‡ Proper study of mankind; an inquiry into the science of human relations. Harper 1948 xx, 311p $3.50 301

1 Man 2 Social problems (W) 48-8642

"Mr Chase was asked to write this new book by the Social Science Research Council. In it he has undertaken to run a chain-and-compass line across the social sciences, thus acquainting the general public with their primary importance. He explains how we should go about putting to practical use our existing knowledge of the social sciences in the cause of better government, wiser management and more productive education and research and he leaves the reader with the optimistic sense that, aided by social science, man can yet be master of himself and the machines he has created." In this book "the author's purpose has been to produce an introduction to sociology which will be readable and meaningful for the beginning student. The text presents the varied special fields and approaches of contemporary sociology as an integrated story; it does not, however, present a system of sociology, nor is it a 'social problems' text. The emphasis throughout is on the dynamics of social structures—the instability of forms of social life. A new feature is the analytic dissection of society into its component systems: technologies, ideologies, and organization, in an attempt to demonstrate the interdependence of the various elements of society." "The foundation of this book is a particular experience in applying some of the principles and methods of social science, especially cultural anthropology, sociology and psychiatry, to the wartime analysis of Japanese morale. The work was done for policy makers in the government who needed to know about the nature of Japanese morale, its strength, what changes were occuring and what, if anything, could be achieved by psychological warfare. After victory it became possible to re-examine many of the conclusions with the benefit of later information; early diagnoses were compared with how things did, in fact, turn out. Now, due to the lifting of security restrictions, it is possible to report the result." Foreword

This work "attempts to present a system of sociology as a generalizing science of sociocultural phenomena possessing its own set of referential principles, its own meaningful-causal method, and its own special task among the other social and humanistic disciplines. The work unfolds a systematic theory of the structure and dynamics of social, cultural, and personality systems. It is little concerned with physical, biological, and other 'presociological' problems; instead it confines itself to a study of sociocultural phenomena in their structural and dynamic aspects." 1 Population 43-12157
"This book eschews the traditional discussions of historical speculations concerning population and so-called population laws and pioneers in emphasizing the social origin and meaning of the facts it presents. The best available data, gleaned from numerous specialized monographs, have been utilized. The result is a brief, lucid, and balanced survey of the nation's population in a world setting." "Originally published in 1930. . . and now substantially revised in a 'post-war edition.' Against the conclusion that 'private ownership of the means of production is no longer compatible with democratic institutions' and that 'the principle of national sovereignty has exhausted its usefulness,' Laski is here concerned first with the definition of liberty and a description of the political mechanisms on which it depends, then with the necessity for freedom of the mind (freedom of speech) as a safeguard of liberty, and finally with the effect of political power on liberty." "The author, former assistant Attorney General . . . presents the thesis that our civil rights are today under attack in a way ominously reminiscent of Germany in 1932. The supporting evidence, recitation of personal experience, cannot but be taken seriously by anyone to whom the ideals of American society are more than a mere verbiage." San Francisco Chronicle
"Mr. Rogge's book is a political tract which unfortunately distorts what might have been a most useful attack on the hysterics of the Un-American Activities Committee, the futilities and injustice of the loyalty purges and the senseless and dangerous drive to put all Communists outside the law." "Undoubtedly the foundation-work of modern economic thought. . . You will find the basic principles that Smith embodied in his book explained in all the histories of economic thought. What you will not find is the skill, the charm, the greatness with which he wove them into the fabric of his chapters." Max Lerner in Introduction

Soule, George Henry, 1887-

Introduction to economic science. Viking 1948 154p $2.50 330

1 Economics (W) 48-10337

"A noted economist and one time editor of the 'New Republic' introduces the reader to economics, not as the theory and precepts of the big names in the field, but as a developing science capable of measuring forces in our actual national economy. . . A brief introduction to the science of economics, which bypasses the lingo of the specialist, and makes lucid, informative reading for the layman." Kirkus

"New ideas and recently developed economic concepts are explained for the general reader who wants to know more about the actual operation of depressions, inflation, and the national budget." Publishers' weekly

Principles of economics. 4th ed. Macmillan 1939 2v illus ea $4 330

1 Economics 39-13488

A standard test first published 1911

"In these eminently readable volumes, Professor Taussig has covered the leading questions of economic theory. . . Though assuming no previous study of the subject, the book is addressed to readers of mature intelligence. . . The ease born of thorough familiarity with every part of the subject, and of long practice in successful teaching of mature students, is apparent in the style throughout." Nation

"The reviewer is impressed anew with the maturity and breadth, as well as with the literary style, which are outstanding characteristics of Taussig's Principles. These qualities have been retained in the present edition, which remains a monument to the ripe scholarship, the catholicity, and the social vision of its distinguished author." Annals Amer. acad.

"By 'absentee ownership' Veblen means control of industry and land, not by absent individuals but by business enterprise. Thus, he says that the country town, which shapes public sentiment and gives character to American culture, is itself located and controlled by real estate interests. Theoretical, analytical, iconoclastic and stimulating." Cleveland

"Contains the first seven chapters of the Theory of the Leisure Class, large selections from The Place of Science and Absentee Ownership, and articles from six other books. In his note on selections the editor says his purpose has been 'to pick enough selections to give a sense of Veblen's variety, flavor, power; to do justice to his academic economic and social theory, but to give the greater emphasis to his commentaries on social institutions and current practices—in short, to keep in mind the lay reader rather than the technical one; to give as many as possible of his classic passages around which legends have grown up; to show both Veblen the elusive ironist and Veblen the explicit radical; and finally—and perhaps most to the point—to give the selections I happen to like and remember best, which means those that shook up my own thinking and left scars on it.'" "The new arrangement of material which distinguishes this text from books in common use, divides the subject according to topics of economic moment and then traces the evolution of ideas regarding these topics. Historical beginnings are examined. A discussion of contemporaneous thought in kindred fields, especially social philosophy, illuminates each development in the realm of economics. The contributions of various schools and individuals are analyzed, with careful attention to the current scene—the theories of John Maynard Keynes, authoritarianism, controversies over money and business cycles. 1 U.S.—Economic conditions [34-27051]

An analysis of economic events. The author describes plenty in terms not of its sales value but of its serviceability: power to give us all food and shelter, fun and security. Poverty in the midst of plenty is no paradox, the author insists, but the logical outcome of a system in which the supplying of human needs is only a by-product. This book surveys the field . . . industry by industry, showing the technical potentialities behind estimates and certain important limitations on future expansion

"This readable study of the limited area in which the annual wage setup has operated follows through with an analysis of what its wider application could mean in terms of economic stabilization. The three large companies who have pioneered in the idea are described as to aims and accomplishment and a hypothetical discussion of the annual wage as it might work out in the construction industry throws light on the possibilities of industry-wide application. The attitude is positive throughout but difficulties are not minimized. The point of view is that of the community rather than that of either management or labor." Bkl.

1 Communism

"This centennial edition of the 'Communist Manifesto' includes, besides Frederick Engels's introduction to the English translation, a special preface written in 1933. This preface treats in some detail the modern application of the principles laid down in the 'Communist Manifesto'." Foreword to special centennial edition
"The 'Manifesto' was published as the platform of the 'Communist League,' a workingmen's association, first exclusively German, later on international, and, under the political conditions of the Continent before 1848, unavoidably a secret society." Preface

First detailed survey of that vast movement of industrial capital across the Canadian-American frontier, a financial exchange which is one of the outstanding factors in the relationship of these two countries. Both in magnitude and in persistence this movement is unique in the world today. The authors of this volume have confined themselves to an exploration and mapping of the uncharted area, which is obviously of the greatest interest and importance to all serious students of North American economy and of equal interest to that larger public whose fortunes are so deeply involved with the industrial relationship of Canada and the United States

A "definitive history of international law, from the time of the early Greeks to the outbreak of the World War II. The author correlates legal history with political developments, which broadens its scope of interest. He traces the seeds of the law of nations in the Greek and Roman civilizations and the great strides made in legal history through the Middle Ages up to the Congress of Vienna which opened the modern era of international law." "The purpose of this book is to demonstrate that as long as the human race continues to be divided into separate and independent states, there can be no enduring peace. According to Mr Reves nothing can abolish war except a genuine world government with power to establish a system of universal law and limit national sovereignty; and since the statesmen of the United Nations have refused to recognize this fundamental truth, all their attempts to organize peace by means of a league or security organization can lead only to new international conflicts." Mr Alfred Lief, the editor "has selected, and grouped effectively, those opinions which reveal, through flashing epigram and sparkling phrase, the keen intellectual penetration of a man whose knowledge of law is broadened by his philosophy of life and his insight into the workings of social and economic forces. . . The dull and technical citation of cases yields to passages which show a rare sensitiveness to beauty and appreciation of art and literature. A copyright case contains revealing references to Goya, Degas, Manet. A case involving the price of theatre tickets furnishes an opportunity to contrast American culture with that of France." N.Y. This book offers a picture of life at the Naval academy. The career of the typical midshipman is followed at every stage from the day when the plebe is sworn in to that proud moment four years later when he receives his commission as an ensign in the Navy or a second lieutenant in the Marine corps. His work and his play, in fact every activity which goes to make up his crowded life receives its due quota of attention

"Published on the Louis Stern memorial fund"

This volume (part I of a proposed three-volume series) represents a comprehensive statement of general principles in measurement and guidance at the college-preparatory and freshman levels. It surveys progress in the evolution of prognostic measures and offers the layman a simplified outline of basic statistical concepts. Tests of general intelligence, of achievement in specific fields, and of unitary traits or primary mental abilities are discussed as background materials essential to the evolution of aptitude tests

High-school personnel work today. McGraw 1946 277p (McGraw-Hill ser. in educ) $3 371.42
1 High schools 2 Personnel service in education 46-5619
"The book is written primarily for educators working in high schools—administrators, teachers, and specialists—interested in and concerned with student personnel work. It is an attempt to present a synthesis of the current theories on personnel work, to indicate their strong and weak points, to show similarities and basic agreements, and to smooth out the wrinkles that may be causing the secondary school people to trip in their thinking about high-school personnel work today. The aim is to assist the reader to understand student personnel work. . . The author's aim is two-fold: (1) to bring together in a single volume the more important concepts of high-school personnel work and (2) to coordinate these concepts in order to assist high-school workers to handle more adequately certain pressing problems of student guidance today." Guidance of children through physical education. Barnes, A.S. 1946 292p illus $2.50 371.7

1 Education of children 2 Physical education and training 46-5310

"From the content, one may be inclined to judge that this publication is a course of study for physical-education teachers. However, it is much more than that. It gives a broad educational philosophy which may be helpful to all elementary-school teachers, and it shows strength in its style, organization, and illustrations. It does not overlook the essential element in any good guidance program—evaluation. . . Whether or not the reader agrees with the philosophy of education and the inclusion of such a program within the school curriculum, this book will furnish him with a challenge and cause him to be more critical of the type of physical-education program now offered." fundamental purpose of his rehabilitation . . . He stresses a complete service rather than its medical phases. . . Among the many points stressed by Dr. Kessler are the importance of the physically handicapped as a source of manpower; the powerful factor of social prejudice; the desirability of combining public services for the child and adult handicapped; the establishment of independent state rehabilitation agencies; and the unique and radical idea of establishing a universal health record as a means of assessing manpower resources and correcting preventable defects and disabilities." "The text has been divided into three main sections, dealing respectively with reading, writing, and arithmetic. The material on reading includes the special problems presented by assignments in geography and history. Handwriting, spelling, and composition have been included under the general topic of writing, since each contributes to written work and since all three should be closely integrated with one another. The third section contains material on the fundamental processes and on problem solving in arithmetic. Each major section deals with such important phases of the subject as learning, motivation, difficulty, readiness, and remedial work." Preface

"This volume seeks to define and interpret the newer trends in educational practice, particularly as they have been developed through the principles of organized learning and unified teaching, and as they relate to child and youth. The reader will here find described the application and the results of realistic learning experiences at school; he will see how children have helped plan their school life and have taken increased responsibility for their own learning. Here also are reflected the

I learn from children; an adventure in progressive education. Simon & Schuster 1948 204p $2.75 372
1 New York (City) City and country school 48-4040

"City and Country, one of America's outstanding progressive schools, was founded on the idea that the school should fit the child rather than the other way round. This is Caroline Pratt's history of that school, from the time it started with six pupils in 1914. The progressive parent will find much to interest him. Miss Pratt saw to it that they received first-hand experience, later supplemented by reading for more information; thus they learned to think and find the answers to their own questions." Cincinnati

First published 1906

Folkways the author defines as "ways of doing things" which are gradually recognized as expedient and develop into established customs. Their origins are lost in mystery; but they are always and everywhere a controlling social force, regulating in every detail the life of uncivilized races and hardly less potent in the life of civilized peoples. With great labor Professor Sumner has assembled a mass of materials, gathered from almost all accessible sources, and with rare insight and scientific caution has sought to elicit their meaning. The result is an important contribution to the scientific study of society

The family; from institution to companionship. Am. bk. 1945 800p illus maps $4.75 392

1 Family 46-204

"The thesis of the book is that the family is in transition from an institution where the unifying factors were authority and tradition to a companionship where unity inheres in the mutual affection and comradeship of its members. Materials have been drawn from a wide variety of sources to document and to analyze this fundamental trend in family organization. Use of personal documents to introduce the problems discussed makes the volume very readable." Journal of home economics

Chase, Stuart, 1888-
Tyranny of words. Harcourt 1938 396p illus $2.39 412

1 Semantics 2 Thought and thinking
(W) 38-27018

The author explores the little-known science of semantics, that is, the meaning of words and their use as communication. In the first half of the book, he has made a popularization of the difficult study of semantics, based on the authoritative works of four experts in this field. From this study he builds a semantic discipline which the reader may apply to philosophy, economics, law, logic and politics. The second half of the book is a practical application of the discipline to the confused use of abstractions such as idealism, liberty, new deal, fascism, etc., used by orators, editorial writers, diplomats and judges

The aim of this book is to give a comprehensive view of the meaning of words and the connection between language and thought. It offers suggestions for better writing, sharper reading and clearer thought. Includes the vocabulary of Basic English and instructions for its use

"The most general praise for this book is perhaps expressed in the statement that it makes its subject fascinating without indulging in a vain attempt to make it easy. Mr. Walpole, who is introduced as a representative of the Harvard University Committee on Communication, says that semantics calls for flexibility of mind. That his own mind has this quality is happily obvious." N.Y. Times

1 English language—Dictionaries 49-1857

First edition 1893 had title "Standard dictionary. It is frequently reprinted with slight changes in the plates, insertion of new words, etc. Latest issue 1949"

"A serviceable one volume work. Its special feature is emphasis upon current information, i.e. present day meaning, pronunciation, spelling, and the subordination of the historical to the current information. Full vocabulary, about 450,000 words including 65,000 proper names, aims to include all live words of the language in standard speech and literature of the day and terms commonly used dialectically by large numbers of people in different parts of the English speaking world. Prefers simpler spelling. . . Contains considerable encyclopedic information and many illustrations and good colored plates. Published in both a 'regular' and a 'subscription' edition. The regular edition does not contain the appendix 'History of the world day by day.'" Mudge

Second edition, 1934. The 1950 printing added a 20-page "New words section"

"The oldest and most famous American dictionary, a good all round dictionary with no marked specialization or bias, well edited, reliable, and noted particularly for the clearness of its definitions. The most used, and for general purposes the most useful, of the one volume dictionaries. A special feature . . . is the divided page, containing in the upper part the main words of the language and in the lower part, (now much reduced) in finer print, various minor words. . . Other special points to remember in using the work are: definitions given in historical sequence, pronunciation indicated by Webster phonetic alphabet (not by the International phonetic), hyphenization indicated by single hyphen, division of syllables by either accent or centered period." "For classroom use in connection with the growing number of courses in grammar which are being offered in universities and colleges. . . The thirty-two chapters, divided into two parts, one dealing with accidence and one with syntax, will provide ample material for any class. . . The attempt is made to draw as clear a line as possible between the science of the English language, which is to say its grammar, and the art of the English language, which is commonly taught under the terms rhetoric, composition, and English. . . While attempting to present the grammar of Modern English against its historical background, which is the only method leading to adequate comprehension, I have attempted to exclude instruction properly belonging to a textbook on the history of the English language." Preface

Hermans, Mabel Clare, and Shea, Marjorie Nichols
New studies in grammar. Holt 1946 496p illus $1.80 425

1 English language—Grammar 46-3428

"The learning exercises are in paragraph form rather than in isolated and unrelated sentences. Furthermore, the subject matter of all the exercises in each unit deals with different phases of one general subject. The lessons of each unit are therefore interrelated in two ways: first, they deal with one general phase of grammar, and second, they are presented by means of one general subject. . . Each lesson presents three types of practice exercises. In the exposition of each lesson a sample practice exercise presents the specific grammatical information of the lesson and provides an opportunity for the pupils to work with that information before they work the assignment independently. The A Practice in each lesson consists of one or more assignments covering the grammatical facts that all pupils need to know. . . The B Practices are of two kinds. Generally the B Practice presents to the pupils an opportunity to use the grammatical facts in original work. At other times the B Practice presents additional grammatical facts that are not fundamental to a general understanding of the facts discussed in the lesson." Preface

"An abridgement of the author's important work on the subject which has been widely known for many years. To reduce three large volumes into one small one, severe compression was necessary; but the author has avoided the mistake of attempting merely to popularize. While he has had to omit or pass by summarily a good many minor scholars, he has taken care that the greater men shall not suffer injustice. In particular we are glad to see that he has retained sufficient indication of titles and editions, and while shortening, has not suppressed his foot-notes. He has even been able to include a fair proportion of the illustrations which formed an interesting feature in the larger book." English hist. rev.

"Russian, due to its unfamiliar alphabet, has gained an undeserved reputation as a difficult language. Once over that hurdle, however, it is no harder than any other; in fact, here are many words in Russian similar to their English equivalents. The author is a young philologist who is developing easy ways to learn languages for armed forces—and his book first teaches the Russian alphabet in an amusing way—with pictures and a game technique—and then goes on to simple words and sentences." "In his new collection of essays, most of which appeared in the (British) Daily Worker during the war, Haldane makes no attempt to conceal the fact that he is Marxist. . . In 250 pages Haldane chats about a breath-taking number of topics. He gives short sketches of a number of men whose scientific achievements have impressed him. He discusses cats, insects, potatoes, trees, and lobsters. He writes of temperature, blood, evolution, and fatigue; of diseases ranging from the common cold to cancer; of X-rays and coal mine explosions; of the spectroscope and electron microscope. Altogether there are over eighty separate essays." Sat. rev. of lit.

"This book shows the vital part played by science, from insecticides to the atomic bomb. . . [It] records the history of the Office of Scientific Research, in language for the layman. In the space of months, scientists accomplished what would ordinarily have taken years. New weapons, improvement of old ones; anti-submarine devices; radar; bombs and incendiaries; landing craft and assault weapons; preventive medicine; penicillin." Kirkus

"Series of [the Terry] lectures delivered at Yale University in which Conant examines the problem of how to give the non-scientific scholar a better understanding of pure or basic science. He maintains that a careful study of the history of the development of science is the best possible approach. On the basis of such study he proposes that courses covering this field—showing the relationship between science and society—be seriously contemplated by our educators." Library journal

Darwin, Charles Robert, 1809-1882

Charles Darwin and the voyage of the Beagle; ed. with an introduction by Nora Barlow. Philosophical lib. 1946 p279 illus map $3.75 508

1 Beagle expedition, 1831-1836 2 Voyages around the world 46-5607

"The series of 36 letters written by Darwin to his family during the famous five-year voyage, are here published in their entirety for the first time. The small notebooks which he carried on his inland journeys have been examined closely for further significant material . . . [The editor] Lady Barlow is Charles Darwin's granddaughter and a notable Darwin scholar." Publisher's note

Written in 1839 as the outcome of the author's voyage around the world. Its observations are for the most part still valid and its entertaining style makes it always readable

Other editions now, 1948, available are:

made possible more adequate treatment of certain other fields." Preface

"Addressed to the student and the general reader this volume goes back to the origin of scientific knowledge, and of the scientific method which has not only revolutionized scientific study but has been widely applied to all kinds of human activity. The writers begin with the ancient Babylonians, Assyrians, Egyptians and Phoenicians whose monuments and inscriptions have furnished the material for the beginnings of scientific study. The development of the science of mathematics, astronomy and medicine and the contribution made by different nations occupies nine chapters. The second half of the text starts with the quickening influences of the age of discovery at the end of the fifteenth and the beginning of the sixteenth century and traces the progress of modern national, physical and mathematical science to the beginning of the twentieth century." "During recent years, the elements of precision has been introduced into manufacturing to such an extent that facility in highly accurate computations is an important skill which the all-around mechanic and technician must have. This text has been designed to develop that facility. It provides specific instruction in computing results accurately within the limits of the measuring instruments and gages commonly available in modern shops." Preface

1 Trigonometry 46-7820

"In spite of the word 'refresher' this explanation of plane and spherical trigonometry is sufficiently detailed to make the book of value to those studying the subject for the first time. Each topic is approached by easy stages, in question-and-answer form. The treatment progresses from the fundamental trigonometric functions through the use of logarithms, the use of slide-rule, and the solution of triangles." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Contents: Sun and its energy; Anatomy of atoms; Transmutation of elements; Can subatomic energy be harnessed; Alchemy of the sun; Sun among the stars; Red giants and the youth of the sun; White dwarfs and the dying sun; Can our sun explode; Formation of stars and planets; Birth of the universe; Chronology

"An excellent book for the general reader as well as the scientist. The chapters on atoms and on transmutation of the elements will appeal particularly to the reader with a limited scientific background and the chapters on the sun in relation to the other heavenly bodies are unusually well written. The pen-and-ink sketches help materially to clarify the text." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

"It has been the authors' chief purpose to produce a textbook which shall include the essentials of a comprehensive knowledge of practical surveying and at the same time be adapted to the use of teachers and students in technical schools. . . Considerable stress is laid upon the practical side of surveying. The attempt is made not only to give the student a thorough training in the fundamental principles and in approved methods of surveying, computing, and plotting, but also to impress upon him the importance of accuracy and precision in all of his work in the field and the drafting-room." * Fundamentals of physics and their applications in modern life. Garden City pub. co. 486p illus $1 530
1 Physics (W) 45-3749
First published 1945 by Blakiston in the New home library
"This book presents the essentials of the whole field of Physics. . . Illustrations have been . . . planned under the author's direction so as to give added clarity to the text and to demonstrate laboratory experiments. . . The book is divided into two parts. Part One deals with the 'Fundamentals of Physics'; Part Two is devoted to 'Physics in Modern Life.'" Preface

Dull, Charles Elwood, 1878-
* Modern physics. Rev. Holt 1943 598, xxv p illus $2.88 530
1 Physics (W) 43-2805
First published 1922 under title: "Essentials of modern physics." "The book has all the material needed to meet College Entrance Examination Board requirements. It can be used, too, with non-college groups in differentiated courses." Preface

Freeman, Ira Maximilian, 1905-
Invitation to experiment; with photographs and drawings by Mae and Ira Freeman. Dutton 1940 238p illus $2.75 530
1 Physics—Experiments (W) 40-31357
"Simple experiments which can be performed with ordinary objects introduce basic principles of science. Written informally, to help the layman learn while having a good time." Bkl.

Harrison, George Russell, 1898-
* Atoms in action; the world of creative physics. 3d ed. Morrow 1949 406p illus $5 530
1 Atoms 2 Physics (W) 49-5021
First published 1939 and revised 1941. The 1949 edition has added a new chapter on the consequences to human welfare of the scientists' work
Popular exposition of the latest developments in physics and their use in our daily lives. Contents: Taming of energy; When physics goes farming; Sound rides the wire; Glass—more precious than rubies; Light for a living world; Ransomed electron; Sound borrows wings; Eyes that see through atoms; The doctor and the physicist; Glass sharpens vision; Eyes for the memory; Sight conquers space; Capture of melody; Outwitting the weather; Man climbs the winds; Science in war and after; Atom yields power; The end is not yet; Suggested reading
Much of the material originally formed the basis of a series of Lowell lectures entitled "Modern physics and human welfare"

Hausmann, Erich, 1886- and Slack, Edgar P. 1885-
Physics. 3d ed. Van Nostrand 1948 793p illus $5 530
1 Physics 48-8685
First published 1935. In the 1949 edition "the text has been somewhat rearranged, with certain chapters combined. Additions include an entire new set of problems and a treatment of the Mks. System of units." Publishers' weekly
"A standard college textbook on physics, presenting clearly principles involved and emphasizing the engineering application of physical science and solution of practical problems." Library journal

Howe, Harley Earl, 1882-
Introduction to physics. 2d ed. McGraw 1948 599p illus $4.50 530
1 Physics 48-8270
First published 1942. The 1948 edition has been enlarged by the inclusion of new topics and expansion of the treatment of some subjects
"Attempts to be 'practical' by making frequent mention of the everyday experience of the reader, and it repeatedly invites him to the educative exercise of arguing with himself about what that experience must signify." Preface
Supplementary reading: p5-6

Lemon, Harvey Brace, 1885-
From Galileo to the nuclear age; an introduction to physics. Rev. ed. of "From Galileo to cosmic rays." Photographs by the author; drawings by Chichi Lasley. Univ. of Chicago press 1946 451p illus $5 530

1 Physics A 46-6075

The 1934 edition is analyzed in Essay and general literature index

First published 1934. In the 1946 edition which has been brought up-to-date "the later chapters that come close to the border line of knowledge have been advanced with it, largely by re-writing and considerable additions of things undreamed of even seven years ago. Here and there in earlier chapters, where the longest shadows of coming events reached back, minor alterations have been made—the most difficult part for the author." Preface to second edition

"It is as authoritative and up-to-date as any book dealing with so virile a science could possibly be. Its story is told in simple, straight-forward style, and with interesting explanations of many every-day experiences. . . The illustrations in this book are remarkable in number and type. . . A stereoscopic lens with which to view the photographs is furnished by the publishers with the attractively boxed volume." Scientific book club review

Luhr, Overton, 1907-1942
* Physics tells why; an explanation of some common physical phenomena. Atomic energy ed. Illus. by R. C. Schmidt. Ronald 1946 387p illus (Humanizing science ser) $3.75 530

1 Physics (W) 46-8372

First published 1943, the 1946 edition adds three new chapters; the revisions were made by Ralph Johnson

Contents: Of things in general; Some mechanical principles and their applications; Some special kinds of motion; Behavior of solids, liquids, and gases; Electricity: some of its manifestations; Magnetism and some of the applications of electricity; Of light and color; Vision and the bending of light rays; About heat and cold; About the weather; Waves, sound, and music; Electricity and radiation; Radar, rockets, and other recent wonders; Atomic energy in war and peace; Questions and answers

Masson, Louis Talwin, 1897-
Physics made easy; ed. by J. F. Piccard. Rev. ed. School science press 1943 400p illus $1.79, pa $1 530

1 Physics 43-15637

First published 1938. In the 1943 edition, a unit on twentieth century physics replaces the former one on safety and a new unit containing a digest of examination material is included

"Physics is here presented pictorially and with simple text, using such everyday applications as are easily recognized by boys and girls. 'Old fashioned' equations and formulas are replaced by the 'graformula,' which enables the pupil to find any desired value by merely covering the factor wanted. There are many problems and test questions." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Meyer, Jerome Sydney, 1895-
ABC of physics. Dial press 1944 346p illus $3.50 530

1 Physics (W) 45-1405

A guide to physics written in a non-technical style that enables the layman to understand and appreciate the mechanical wonders used and enjoyed in everyday life

Millikan, Robert Andrews, 1868- Gale, Henry Gordon, 1874-1942, and Edwards, Charles William, 1873-
First course in physics for colleges. Rev. ed. Ginn 1938 712, lxii p illus $4.25 530

1 Physics 38-18097

First published 1928

"The book is written in an exceedingly clear style and is so well illustrated that anyone earnestly desiring to improve in an elementary way his or her knowledge of the whole field of physics will find its perusal a source of interest and pleasure." Journal of the Franklin institute

Richtmyer, Floyd Karker, 1881-1939, and Kennard, Earle Hesse, 1885-
Introduction to modern physics. 4th ed. McGraw 1947 759p illus (Int. ser. in pure and applied physics) $6 530

1 Physics 48-5157

First published 1928. The 1947 "edition of this well-established text shows only a few major changes when compared to the third edition (1942). . . As before, the work is designed for senior college students or graduate students who have completed basic college courses in mathematics and physics." N.Y. public lib. New technical books

Contents: Historical sketch; Electromagnetic waves and moving charges; Photoelectric and thermionic effects; Theory of relativity; Origin of the quantum theory; Nuclear atom and the origin of spectral lines; Wave mechanics; Atomic structure and optical spectra; Quantum theory of specific heats; X-rays; The nucleus; Cosmic rays

Semat, Henry 1900-
Fundamentals of physics. Rinehart 1945 593p illus $4 530

1 Physics (W) 45-946

"I have attempted . . . to keep the book at a level suitable for first year college students, and of such size that it can be covered conveniently in the typical one year course of five or six hours per week." Preface

Glossary of some important terms: p561-75. Answers to odd-numbered problems: p577-81

Physics in the modern world. Rinehart 1949 434p illus $5 530

1 Physics (W) 49-8625

A textbook designed for nonscience college students, emphasizing both laboratory and field work as well as historical and theoretical aspects

A list of books for supplementary reading: p399-401 Glossary: p412-25
